

User Story

Recommended by a friend, Bob downloaded the Mobile Museum App, and opened it to have a try. He found that on the well-designed homepage, there is a function named Exploration. Bob is interested in ancient porcelain. When he found the Porcelain Tag in the Exploration page, he clicked that tag and entered in. He then found that not only beautiful pictures of different porcelain collections in this museum were shown, but also many information under the column named Archive, like year, excavator date, stories behind and many other useful things. Bob was satisfied with this function, as this helped him gain comprehensive knowledge about the specific item. He then plays with the app from time to time.

During the usage of the app, Bob found the Recommend column on the homepage often displayed different relics. Through this function, Bob gets to know much knowledge from the fields that he was unfamiliar with. Sometimes Bob does not have enough time to read all the introductions, so he registered an account so that he can use the Favorites folder to collect things he likes. Also, Bob finds the like button under each relic useful when he wants to recommend things that he likes to other users, as this helps push the relic to the Recommend column on the homepage.

One day, Bob found that his girlfriend was interested in a piece of art which is the treasure of the museum. Bob wanted to know more about it, but the information on the internet was not precise enough. Then it came to him that the Mobile Museum app has a Search function. He typed in the name of the piece and pressed the "go" button and got an all-round introduction of the piece of art, which helps him have a nice talk with his girlfriend about this topic.

One day, Bob found a new exhibition was on display through the Exhibition Information column. He pressed the link and got more information about the exhibition and found it was quite amazing. He invited his girlfriend to see the exhibition. However, when they arrived at the museum, Bob found a long queue of people waiting to buy the ticket. Bob's girlfriend didn't want to waste too much time on queuing. Then Bob remembered that the Museum Mobile app has the function of online ticket purchasing. So he took out his cellphone and bought two tickets, entered the museum soon and spent a great time with his girlfriend.
